Course Summary
This course provides a detailed overview of the history and development of the Juvenile Justice system in the United States. We will examine the social construction of juvenile delinquency and explore the intersection of law, race, gender, geography and socio-economic status with the determination and treatment of juvenile delinquency. Students will be encouraged to critically consider and evaluate the way so-called problem (or merely misbehaving) youth are treated (arguably disparately) in and across America. Particularly, we will survey their treatment in juvenile courts, with juvenile residential and non-residential interventions, as well as with the use of restorative justice and diversion programs. Students will be challenged to identify weaknesses of and suggest alternatives to today’s juvenile justice system.

Learning Goals

In accordance with the following learning goals adopted by the Program in Criminal Justice this course will engage students on the three goals of competence, critical thinking and independent research.

1. COMPETENCE:
a. Theory. Students who complete the major in criminal justice should understand and be able to articulate, both orally and in writing, the core theoretical concepts that form the foundation of analysis and research in criminology and criminal justice today. Core concepts are derived from explanations of crime from a variety of perspectives, including biogenic, psychological, and sociological approaches. There are a myriad of theories of crime that are informed by these perspectives, including: classical, control, critical, ecology, labeling, learning, strain, and trait-based approaches. Theoretical literacy should extend to multicultural and international understanding.

b. Institutions. Students who complete the major in criminal justice should understand the special role of three types of institutions: Police, Corrections, and Courts. In addition, students should know how institutional forms vary across jurisdictions and how these institutions interact with and influence each other.

c. Research Methods. Students who complete the criminal justice major should be familiar with the tools, techniques, and data sources necessary for empirical analysis. Students should understand the various ways that empirical analysis is used in the scientific approach: for description, for developing, and for testing theories. They should be able to analyze data using computer applications and should be familiar with basic statistical techniques and regression analysis. They should be able to read and assess research from a wide range of sources, including general interest, academic, and government publications.

2. CRITICAL THINKING:

Upon completion of the major students should be able to apply their understanding of core concepts and quantitative tools to analyze and research real world problems, and evaluate alternative policy proposals on a range of criminal justice issues, from micro-level analyses relevant to particular cases to management concerns to macro-level analyses of legislative and other broad-scale policies. Accomplishment of this goal will require that students can apply their literacy and numeracy skills to different institutional structures, within the U.S. and across countries.

3. SCHOLARSHIP:

Qualified majors should have an opportunity through such avenues as advanced coursework, internships, and faculty interactions to conduct independent research on matters of central relevance to the field of criminal justice.

Attendance Policy

Students are expected to attend all classes; if you expect to miss one or two classes, please use the University absence reporting website https://sims.rutgers.edu/ssra/ to indicate the date and reason for your absence. An email is automatically sent to me.

Attendance is an important part of your 10% civility grade

Academic Honesty

Academic honesty is a subject that I take very seriously. I encourage all students to familiarize themselves with the Rutgers University policies and procedures on academic honesty, available at http://academicintegrity.rutgers.edu/files/documents/AI_Policy_9_01_2011.pdf

Be assured that any and all violations of honesty, for example, cheating in examinations or plagiarizing others’ work for your written assignments, will be referred to the appropriate authorities.
and sanctioned accordingly. Again, I think it is important that you know where I am coming from on these issues.

Since what counts as plagiarism is not always clear, I quote the definition given in Rutgers' policy: Plagiarism: Plagiarism is the use of another person's words, ideas, or results without giving that person appropriate credit. To avoid plagiarism, every direct quotation must be identified by quotation marks or appropriate indentation and both direct quotation and paraphrasing must be cited properly according to the accepted format for the particular discipline or as required by the instructor in a course. Some common examples of plagiarism are:

- Copying word for word (i.e. quoting directly) from an oral, printed, or electronic source without proper attribution.
- Paraphrasing without proper attribution, i.e., presenting in one’s own words another person’s written words or ideas as if they were one's own.
- Submitting a purchased or downloaded term paper or other materials to satisfy a course requirement.
- Incorporating into one's work graphs, drawings, photographs, diagrams, tables, spreadsheets, computer programs, or other nontextual material from other sources without proper attribution.

A SPECIAL NOTE: Students often assume that because information is available on the Web it is public information, does not need to be formally referenced, and can be used without attribution. This is a mistake. All information and ideas that you derive from other sources, whether written, spoken, or electronic, must be attributed to their original source. Such sources include not just written or electronic materials, but people with whom you may discuss your ideas, such as your roommate, friends, or family members. They deserve credit for their contributions too!

Statement on student disability

In accordance with University policy, if you have a documented disability and require accommodations to obtain equal access in this course, please contact me at the beginning of the semester or when given an assignment for which an accommodation is required. Students with disabilities must verify eligibility through the Office of Student Disability Services. The University Disability policy and procedure is available at http://disabilityservices.rutgers.edu/ Students with disabilities requesting accommodations must follow the procedures outlined at http://disabilityservices.rutgers.edu/request.html

If you need accommodation under the disability policy, please let me know by January 28.

Requirements
There are a number of basic requirements for this course, which include attendance, active participant in class discussions, term paper, one mid-term examination, and one final examination.

Term Paper
You are responsible for turning in a 10-page paper that will concentrate on one or more topic area in juvenile justice. A one-paragraph paper outline is due by Thursday, February 25, 2016. Papers are due by Thursday, April 14, 2016.

NO LATE PAPERS WILL BE ACCEPTED.
There are NO extra credit assignments.

Mid-term Examinations
There will be one in-class mid-term examination on Thursday, March 24th that will cover material, lecture and reading assignments, up to that point in the course.

Final Examination
Tentative Date of Final Exam is Thursday, May 5, 2016.

Missing an Exam or Being Late for an Exam
If you miss an exam without discussing with me the circumstances that preclude attendance BEFORE the exam is administered, you will fail that exam. It is only under the most extraordinary of circumstances that I will administer a make-up. Also, please be advised that I never change grades. If you arrive at an exam after the first student has finished and left, you will not be permitted to sit the exam at that time. This is to ensure the integrity of the examination and reduce the temptation to cheat.

Academic Honesty
I encourage all students to familiarize themselves with the Rutgers University policies and procedures on academic honesty, available at http://teachx.rutgers.edu/integrity/policy.html. Any and all violations of honesty, for example, cheating in examinations or plagiarizing others’ work for your written assignments, will be referred to the appropriate authorities and sanctioned accordingly.
