Class: Political Terrorism- ONLINE, 01:202:311 SUMMER 2018, SECTION B1:04517

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course reviews the essential features and the international framework of terrorism, relying heavily on '9/11' as its present foundation, while providing comprehensive coverage of a number of major events since the 1920s. We address the responsibility over who is responsible for terrorist acts, constraints on the use of force and international human rights. Significant conversations and assignments will focus on how to define terrorism and who is responsible for setting that definition.

Because this class is online, it should not be assumed the class is easy and/or that the work requirements are lessened. Grading standards are high and I expect creative, well-written assignments that demonstrate effort and independent thinking.

A significant portion of the course consists of discussion groups and assignments. In addition, there may be links to related readings, websites, and online videos. The online environment offers a potential advantage to the in-class experience by allowing repeated re-viewing of the video lectures and by enabling student-student interactions through the discussion groups. In addition, the online environment allows a variety of engagement activities that can be used to stimulate student participation that can also be monitored through Sakai tools. It is expected that you are familiar with Sakai. This is not a computer course and you should be familiar prior to taking an online course. I will not answer sakai and computer related questions.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

At the completion of this course, students are responsible for:

- 1) Discuss the different definitions of terrorism and the drawbacks to each.
- 2) Identify various terrorist organizations and assign them to general categories.
- 3) Understand terrorist capabilities and group evolution.
- 4) Name various counter-terrorist organizations of foreign governments and explain unique capabilities.

Learning Goals: A Statement of Principles

The Program Committee for the Program in Criminal Justice at Rutgers University in New Brunswick has adopted a series of learning goals for students who complete the major. These goals represent the consensus of the faculty regarding the concepts a student should grasp and the skills a student should acquire in the course of completing the major.

These goals guide the choices faculty make about the structure of the curriculum and the requirements for our majors. Moreover, they guide faculty and instructors preparing course material and teaching courses.

The Program in Criminal Justice will provide students with a rich understanding of crime and criminal justice in the United States and abroad through an interdisciplinary approach that blends a strong liberal arts educational experience with pre-professional instruction in the field of criminal justice. Graduates of the program will be well-informed citizens on the topic of crime and justice, and qualified for graduate study or for employment as practitioners in a variety of legal, policymaking, and law enforcement fields.

Criminal justice majors graduating from a research university should be able to use critical thinking, factual inquiry, and the scientific approach to solve problems related to individual and group behavior. In addition, students should have an understanding of the legal, political and policymaking processes that affect criminal justice systems in the United States and elsewhere in the world. Finally, students should be familiar with the institutional structures and latest developments in the field in order to engage in meaningful debate about current public policy issues.

Learning Goals for Criminal Justice Majors

1. Competence:

1. a.) Theory. Students who complete the major in criminal justice should understand and be able to articulate, both orally and in writing, the core theoretical concepts that form the foundation of analysis and research in criminology and criminal justice today. Core concepts are derived from explanations of crime from a variety of perspectives, including biogenic, psychological, and sociological approaches. There are myriad theories of crime that are informed by these perspectives, including, classical, control, critical, ecology, labeling, learning, strain, and trait-based approaches. Theoretical literacy should extend to multicultural and international understanding.
2. b.) Institutions. Students who complete the major in criminal justice should understand the special role of three types of institutions: Police, Corrections, and Courts. In addition, students should know how institutional forms vary across jurisdictions and how these institutions interact with and influence each other.
3. c.) Research Methods. Students who complete the criminal justice major should be familiar with the tools, techniques, and data sources necessary for empirical analysis. Students should understand the various ways that empirical analysis is used in the scientific approach: for description, for developing, and for testing theories. They should be able to analyze data using computer applications and should be familiar with basic statistical techniques and regression analysis. They should be able to read and assess research from a wide range of sources, including general interest, academic, and government publications.

2. Critical Thinking:

Upon completion of the major students should be able to apply their understanding of core concepts and quantitative tools to analyze and research real world problems, and evaluate alternative policy proposals on a range of criminal justice issues, from micro-level analyses relevant to particular cases to management concerns to macro-level analyses of legislative and other broad-scale policies. Accomplishment of this goal will require that students can apply their literacy and numeracy skills to different institutional structures, within the U.S. and across countries.

3. Scholarship:

Qualified majors should have an opportunity through such avenues as advanced coursework, internships, and faculty interactions to conduct independent research on matters of central relevance to the field of criminal justice.

REQUIRED READING (Book is not optional)

- 1) Taylor & Swanson. (2016). Terrorism, Intelligence and Homeland Security. Pearson Publishing. ISBN 9780133517125.

COURSE STRUCTURE AND EXPECTATIONS

Each weekly module opens on a Monday morning (except week 1) at 8am and closes on Sunday at 8pm. The deadlines are always on Sundays at 8pm EST.

The formal organization of this course consists of multiple parts: 1) midterm and final exam, 2) weekly chapter reading assignment, 3) weekly assignment and potentially 4) structured student online participation through discussion boards.

Midterm and final exams: These will be given online in short answer/essay. These are worth 50% of the course grade (25% each). You CANNOT use your book.

Weekly chapter reading assignment: Each weekly module will be accompanied by chapters in the books. This ties into the weekly assignment. Do not miss the deadline.

Structured student online participation through discussion boards or assignment: In addition to assigned coursework, logging onto the class website, and viewing the prepared online material, students are expected to spend at least 10 hours over the course of the semester in structured participation. This will be monitored via the discussion boards and assignments. Students will be graded on the level and quality of their participation and guidance will be given at the beginning of the semesters as to make students aware of expectations. Many have a word minimum, usually of 500-750 words. Students are not allowed to use direct quotes from outside sources, as that will be removed from the word minimum. Everything that a student turns in and writes will be processed through the plagiarism software- TurnItIn. A percentage of 30% or higher on TurnItIn will cause for a failing grade. Do not miss the deadline. These are worth 50% together.

COURSE GRADING

Exam 1 25%

Exam 2 25%

Assignments/discussion posts 50%

ACADEMIC DISHONESTY

Academic dishonesty will not be tolerated and any violation will be reported to the Dean of Students. No excuse will ever be tolerated for academic dishonesty, but it is even more important that students understand the repercussions of this unethical behavior. Academic dishonesty includes cheating, the fabrication or invention of information used in an assignment, plagiarism, facilitating the academic dishonesty of others or denying access to materials and resources.
